Here Sister, Let Me Help You Up

Messages of Sisterhood, Self-Care, and Body Love

Stephanie Chinn

A collection of original body-positive feminist art from Instagram personality Stephanie Chinn.

Stephanie Chinn has built an Instagram following of more than 52,000 fans by creating art that celebrates women “taking up space, unapologetically.” Her body-positive self-love message connects perfectly to the current moment, and her original art is a celebration of creativity and feminine power. This book will feature a collection of her work in a gifty format that will appeal to women who are ready to embrace their bodies in all their imperfect glory.

Stephanie Chinn is an American illustrator, writer, and body-confidence advocate. Her work focuses on illustrating the different ways we can remind ourselves that we are enough the way that we are, while simultaneously unpacking the different ways we have been led to believe we are not. Stephanie began to share her work on Instagram in 2019 and within a year attracted more than 50,000 followers. She lives in Toronto with her partner and three dogs.

How to Talk So Men Will Listen

A Coloring Book

Caitlin Peterson; Illustrations by Jason Millet

A sarcastic coloring book that taps into the cultural moment

Men aren't always as enlightened as they should be when it comes to the experiences of women. Sometimes they're too busy mansplaining to really listen. This humorous coloring book uses illustrations and captions to poke fun at double standards, highlight familiar acts of sexism, and reveal what would happen if women were free to say what was really on their mind.

Caitlin Peterson is the author of several coloring and activity books for adults, including You Are a F*cking Badass, Cheer the F*ck Up, and Not Safe for Work: Naughty Word Searches.

The Happy Planet Cookbook

Mostly Plant-Based Recipes for Sustainable Eating

Eva Fox

Reduce your carbon footprint with delicious, easy-on-the-planet recipes.

As climate change increasingly affects our everyday lives, the urgency of taking action has become a focal point for many people. One way to reduce carbon emissions is to eat more plants and fewer animals. A plant-based diet is no longer just for the select few – and it doesn’t have to be strictly vegan. With mostly plant-based recipes that sneak in some bacon, shrimp, or chicken here and there, The Happy Planet Cookbook shows readers how to eat for the health of both the planet and their own bodies.

Zoe Gifford is a freelance writer and food-lover who delights in a good recipe as much as a four-letter word. She lives in Chicago, Illinois with her husband and three succulents.
Let It Go

A Journal for Releasing the Bad and Embracing the Good

Christine Schultz

Learn to embrace change and the journey through life’s stages with this guided journal.

Change is not only unavoidable, it comprises much of what we call living. Rather than fighting natural changes like aging, kids growing up, and retirement, embracing and leaning into these transitions is the path to a full, happy life. From getting sober to moving to a new city to losing a job and finding a new one, half of life is made up of periods of transition. The key to navigating them successfully is to treat them as periods of growth, and this guided journal helps readers do that through insightful prompts and inspiring quotations.

Christine Schultz, an artist and the author of The Book of Love, believes that life is better when you surround yourself with beauty. After 20 years of owning a successful art gallery and events venue, she and her husband chose to roam, now living and working full-time in their Sportsmobile and StudioTruck. As they travel across the country, Christine and Marc share their art and adventures at taylorarts.com.
